II.2.14. Additional information

The quality of the tender offer needed to be a primary decision-making factor so long as the price was within our budget as our goal is to show the highest possible quality in the demonstration broadcasts we will be doing, to serve as an example and a recruitment vehicle for others to do likewise. A less expensive lower quality model, or one with fewer functions, would not meet that need.

Section VI: Complementary information

VI.3. Additional information

The tender offer from MOG Technologies was superior to all other offers in that it included providing all of the functions identified in the platform specifications. In addition, MOG Technologies had superior resources to any other bidders, with a staff of 65 people, most of whom are information engineers. In addition, unlike the other proposers, MOG Technologies had already been working on the technology for interactive multi-screen broadcasts before submitting its tender offer, which means that we would receive the benefit of considerable time, effort, and money already invested in the technology the platform needs. And, finally, MOG Technologies had more experience providing different kinds of digital broadcast related technology to a wider range of top companies in the field of digital broadcasting than any other company submitting a tender offer. All of these factors, together with the fact the price of MOG Technologies' proposal was competitive with the other tender offers when taking into consideration all of the functions offered in their proposal, dictated the choice of MOG Technologies' tender offer as clearly superior in every way.
