The initial two year period will have an estimated value of between 1 000 000 GBP and 3 000 000 GBP (excluding any options).

The Unmanned Air Systems Team (UAST) are currently working with General Atomics — Aeronautical Systems Inc. (GA-ASI) to develop.

The Predator MQ-9B (Protector) unmanned aircraft certified for use within the UK. As part of this development the UAST have a potential requirement for a range of technical support services, including but not limited to:

- Avionic Systems.
- Communication systems and data links.
- Electrical Systems.
- Flight Performance and Handling.
- HMI & HF Integration.
- Structures/Airframe.
- Stores (including weapons) integration.
- Sensors (including lasers).
- Environmental Qualification.
- Icing protection.
- Security Advice.
- Ground Control Station.
- Propulsion Systems.
- Airspace Integration.

This potential requirement will include a number of core tasks which can be planned in advance, however, a large portion (up to 50 %) of the requirement is currently undefinable tasks. Whilst the UAST can provide details of the requirements for broad areas of the work, at this stage it is not known exactly what work, or how much, will be required in each of these broad areas.

For National Security reasons, some areas of the requirement will be restricted to UK nationals only. Any potential providers will need to confirm in their Pre-Qualification Questionnaire (PQQ) submission that they already have, or can employ by 1.8.2018, UK national employees who can work on these restricted areas of the requirement — there is also a requirement for the Technical Coordinator for this contract to be a UK national. Along with this, the potential provider will also need to confirm in their PQQ submission that all personnel working on this contract hold valid and suitable UK security clearances, or that they can be obtained by 1.8.2018.
