systems, to reporting of the results of the surveys. The reporting must, as far as possible, describe the number and proportion of escaped farmed salmon in individual river systems and how these are distributed in the river system. Section IV: Procedure

IV.1. Description

IV.1.1. Type of procedure

Award of a contract without prior publication of a call for competition in the Official Journal of the European Union in the cases listed below

- The works, supplies or services can be provided only by a particular economic operator for the following reason:
 - absence of competition for technical reasons

Explanation:

The monitoring programme needs to use all relevant data sets that contribute to describing the distribution of escaped farmed salmon in river systems in Norway. Examples of such data sets are classification of sport fishing catches such as wild salmon or escaped farmed salmon based on scale analysis, data from classification of potential broodstock in rivers with cultivation measures, data from drift counting in river systems where fish in rivers are recorded and classified as wild salmon or escaped farmed salmon, data from autumn fishing carried out to estimate the proportion of escaped farmed salmon in river systems, and data from other surveys that can contribute to mapping the proportion of escaped farmed salmon in the river systems. Where data is collected will not be decided by the Norwegian Institute of Marine Research. We must therefore enter into cooperation with participants who have relevant data sets for the river system relevant for the monitoring programme. The service that specifically is procured in this connection is processing of data in defined format, and analysis of the data sets. It is important that the supplier of data sets participates in analysis of the data, this is particularly related to local knowledge developed over time in the individual river systems. The data sets are analysed with different statistics tools suited to describe condition and development in relation to the proportion of escaped farmed salmon in the river systems, and the participants in the programme must have good statistics competence. Furthermore, participants in the Monitoring programme contribute to preparing annual reports to the Norwegian Directorate of Fisheries. Based on the above, the Norwegian Institute of Marine Research considers the terms in the Public Procurement Regulations § 13-4, b), 2 met.
