II.1.4. Short description of the contract or purchase(s)

The recently published new Basic Safety Standards Directive (Council Directive 2013/59 /Euratom) modernises European radiation protection legislation by taking into account the latest scientific knowledge, technological progress, and operational experience with current legislation. At the same time, the new BSS Directive consolidates the existing 'acquis' of Euratom radiation protection legislation into 1 single piece of legislation, merging 5 directives and upgrading a recommendation to become legally binding.

As a result of the consolidation process, the new BSS Directive was given a broader scope and a completely new structure improving coherence and clarity of both definitions and requirements. Taking into account the latest scientific knowledge and technological progress, the new Directive entails substantial new requirements in various topical areas, e.g. improving the protection of patients in medical applications, improving the protection of workers, and improving the protection of the public in particular from natural radiation sources. Further to this, the new BSS Directive introduces strengthened requirements on emergency preparedness and response, especially with a view to the lessons learned from the Fukushima accident.

After entry into force of the Council Directive 2013/59/Euratom on the 6.2.2014, Member States will have 4 years to bring into force the laws, regulations and administrative provisions necessary to comply with this Directive.

The Commission is aware that the transposition and implementation of this comprehensive piece of legislation, comprising 99 definitions, 109 articles and 19 annexes, will constitute a major challenge for the respective national legislators and regulators in European Union Member States, candidate States, and EFTA States.

The Commission is therefore planning to organise actions and activities to monitor the transposition of the BSS Directive into Member States' national legislation and to support its implementation.

IV.2. Award criteria

IV.2.1. Award criteria

The most economically advantageous tender in terms of

1. Quality of the proposed methodology. Sub-criterion 1.1 (10 points): this criterion shall allow assessing the activities planned to identify and establish contacts with relevant organisations involved in the transposition and implementation of the BSS. Sub-criterion 1.2 (15 points): this criterion serves to assess the proposed methodology and the planned activities to evaluate Member States' strategies and plans for the transposition of the Directive. The proposed methodology shall allow the detection of issues, the exchange of experiences and resolutions, and the identification of good practices. Sub-criterion 1.3 (15 points): this criterion serves to assess the planning and structure of the general workshop and the topical workshops as well as the activities planned to evaluate the outcomes of these workshops.. Weighting 40

2. Organisation of the work. This criterion will assess how the roles and responsibilities of the proposed team and of the economic operators (in case of joint tenders, including subcontractors if applicable) are distributed for each task. It also assesses the global allocation of time and resources to the project and to each task or deliverable, and whether this allocation is adequate for the work. The tender should provide details on the allocation of time and resources and the rationale behind the choice of this allocation.. Weighting 40

3. Quality system. This criterion will assess the quality system applied to the service foreseen in this tender specification concerning the quality of the deliverables, the language quality check, and continuity of the service in case of absence of a member of the team. The quality system should be detailed in the tender and specific to the tasks at hand; a generic quality system will result in a low score.. Weighting 20
