— educational specific materials and mapping tools (not games or art materials) that are made to help the students understand new concepts, and the logic that the concepts are built on and teaching aids that allows for diversity in the provision of learning styles and differentiation, as well as audio books, e-books, electronic content products and digital learning resources. For primary and secondary schools, the applicable principle is the right to free public primary and secondary school education, cf. the Education Act § 2-15. Supplementary procurements of textbooks, any Procurement of new book sets / textbook series undertaken to fulfil this. The individual schools have decision making authority in regard to which books and teaching aids shall be used in the schooling. This requires an abundance of textbook series and other learning materials. Tenderers must therefore deliver tender offers on all of the product groups in order to be selected as the service provider to the Contracting Authorities. The main orders will be placed in May / June and November / December. There is additional need for ongoing supplementary orders, rush orders and review system of school books and a trial period for digital learning materials.
