II.1.4. Short description

University College London Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust (UCLH) is one of the most complex NHS trusts in the UK, serving a large and diverse population. In July 2004, it was 1 of the first NHS trusts to achieve Foundation Trust status. The Trust is committed to delivering top-quality patient care, excellent education and world class research.

UCLH has a turnover of over 900 000 000 GBP p.a. and contracts to provide services with over 70 primary care trust commissioning bodies. It sees over 1 000 000 outpatients and admits over 170 000 patients each year. The Trust works with the Royal Free and University College Medical School, London South Bank and City universities to offer high-quality training and education.

Services on a day to day basis are delivered through 3 clinical boards each led by an operational Medical Director. This fully devolved clinically led model has been in place for around 15 years.
