The key drivers for the development of a community dermatology service are to provide a local, more accessible and cost-effective service for patients:

- improving outcomes for people with Skin Tumours,
- integrated service delivery in dermatology,
- high quality care for all.

The telemedicine service can then offer clinical advice, (including messages, educational videos to GP's, patients and nurses, or remote real-time face to face consultation) to help with:

- remote diagnosis and reassurance,
- remote diagnosis and advise appropriate pathway for skin cancers,
- diagnosis, investigations and treatment plan for wounds — making sure wounds are diagnosed correctly to support community care services and to provide 'time to heal' date i.e. the date by which that wound should have healed,
- diagnosis and treatment plan for medical dermatoses (rashes).
