II.2.4. Description of the procurement

Expected products include:

- 1) Development and launch of the application;
- 2) Ongoing technical support and updating of the application during the pilot period;
- 3) Training of several IDI staff on use and administration of the application.

The development of the application shall be based on the no-code/low-code development tool and meet the necessary system requirements listed in the document 'System Requirements'. The application should be developed by 20 December 2021.

Following the successful launch of the application, technical support and minor correction will be provided during the piloting phase of the application (planned for the full duration of 2022). The IDI and the successful bidder will jointly agree on the process and methodology to be followed to design and develop the SAI PMF application.

The application should be developed in close collaboration and continuous consultation between the bidder and IDI. The responsible person in charge for the bidder should have good communication skills and the ability to explain technical issues to people with less technical knowledge.

The bidder should teach 2-3 IDI staff how to conduct smaller tasks related to the administration of the application and administration of user communities.
