II.1.4. Short description

Since 2005, the Deutsche Gesellschaft für Internationale Zusammenarbeit (GIZ) GmbH has been actively engaged in Libya, albeit with intermittent pauses due to the civil war. Given the precarious security situation in the region, GIZ coordinates its Libyan operations from Tunisia, maintaining a project implementation office in Tripoli.

The civil war erupted in Libya post the Arab Spring and the ousting of Muammar al-Gaddafi, the nation's longstanding leader. Despite international mediation efforts, conflict continues to define the country. Massive displacements have occurred, and successive administrations have struggled to fulfill expectations regarding nation-building, peace, and democratization. Political divisions persist, and the central government structures are plagued by inefficiency. Operating under the auspices of the German Federal Ministry for Economic Cooperation and Development (BMZ) and the European Union (EU), GIZ collaborates with local authorities to address various domains. This includes a focus on municipal development, decentralization, economic growth, employment, and healthcare.

GIZ extends advisory support to entities like the Libyan Ministry of Local Government, aiding in the process of state decentralization. The organization also conducts training for municipal administration personnel in areas like urban development, project management, and financial oversight. The ultimate goal is to enhance fundamental services such as waste management. Another objective is to empower individuals to reap the benefits of a more robust private sector and improved training opportunities. Consequently, GIZ fosters the growth of micro-enterprises through entrepreneurial training and startup support. Additionally, vocational training is enhanced in sectors with high demand, thereby creating better employment prospects and income for numerous Libyans.

In addition, GIZ is working to enhance primary healthcare in the country by increasing the efficiency of healthcare institutions and providing professional development courses for healthcare staff.
