Descrição: In this competition, climate and environmental considerations are not used as the award criterium, cf. the utilities regulations § 7-9. The contracting authority's assessment is that it gives a clearly better effect to set minimum requirements than to use the climate and environment as a separate award criterion, where the effect is not guaranteed. The contracting authority is obliged to set standardised minimum requirements or criteria for climate footprint or environmental impact in accordance with the regulations on emission requirements for vehicles for public procurement for road transport. However, the contracting authority has assessed that the exception in the regulations § 4 letter a will be used, so that the environmental requirements in § 3 can be waived. Even if the regulation's requirements do not apply, it is however chosen to set minimum requirements for drivetrains to ensure climate and environmental considerations in the best possible way. There are minimum requirements for emission-free material on lines where it is possible to use such material, the minimum requirements for more environmentally friendly fuel rather than fossil fuel on lines where emission-free material cannot be used, and other environmental requirements in the requirement specification. The Norwegian Environment Agency's analysis of the emission reduction potential in Norway up until 2030 states that electrification of lorries and heavy goods vans is among the individual measures with the greatest potential for reducing greenhouse gas emissions within road-going transport. The contracting authority assumes that equivalent assessments apply for their own activities by requiring emission free material in the bus fleet where such material can be used.
